Solving Challenges with Outsourcing

Author Giuditta Cordero-Moss has experienced several issues with editors. English is not her first language, and she requires editing to have her language checked to ensure it complies with her publisher's standards.

“The quality of the service [from previous editors] was not always satisfactory,” explained Cordero-Moss. “The editors needed to be followed up closely; their comments or proposals were not always consistent and sometimes had an impact on the text's original meaning.”

Easy Implementation and Customized Services

Scribendi.com allows customers to request their favorite editors, and holds all editors to the highest standards.

“I have been using the same editor at Scribendi.com for a number of different texts,” said Cordero-Moss. “I am using the services to ensure consistency in a text that may be a collection of different articles or may have chapters written by various authors,” she continued. “The editor understands the meaning of the text, and all the proposed comments and corrections are faithful to the text. The editor is very accurate and ensures consistency in the language, citations, etc. throughout the text. Another positive aspect is that the work is done very quickly.”

Meeting High Customer Expectations

Cordero-Moss gladly recommends Scribendi.com to her peers. She says, “I am recommending your services to my colleagues, PhD students, etc. The quality is good, the service is reliable.”
